It was very late at night, and the station was full of people. Each of them was waiting to buy a ticket for the last train. He bought his ticket, and he was very happy.

All living things do not have the same lifespan. Usually, the faster a living thing grows and moves during its life, the shorter its life will be.

Animals with many offspring may have shorter lives than those with only a few babies. Larger animals live longer than smaller ones. Some animals live only for several weeks, but others can live for more than one hundred years. For example, the lifespan of worker ants is less than a year, but American Box Turtles can live for more than one hundred years. Compared with American Box Turtles, worker ants are smaller. They grow faster, and they have more offspring.

Of course, changes in diet and disease can also make animals live longer or shorter. The following list shows some animals' lifespans without those problems. Maybe you would be surprised to know it.

| Animal | Queen Ant | Worker Ant | Mouse | Kangaroo | Fox | Tiger | Bear | Elephant | American Box Turtle |
